Auction Day Should Help Proving Ground Area

For the people who will have to move their homes, household articles, and farm implements to make way for the Proving Ground just north of here, the monthly Free Auction and Trades Day event which starts in Hope this coming Monday should be a real opportunity.

Marketing of Cantaloupes Beginning Here

Harvesting of Crop Starts Along Prescott & Northwestern

The 1941 cantaloupe crop — a commodity that has made the Blains section of Hempstead county famous for nearly a generation — is starting to market this week, and will be in full swing by Saturday.

The melons are being shipped through at least three loading depots.

The big Blains depot is in charge of M. L. Nelson, well known commission merchant and shipper.

The second big loading point, Alexandria, is getting into action, with Ed Lee, north Hempstead farmer, probably handling operations this year.

At Hendrix crossing, on Highway 24, Lonnie Brooks, independent operator, has set up a third shipping point.

The 1941 cantaloupe crop is reported excellent, and is on time.

Diamond Mine Brings $175,000

Demand for Industrial Diamonds Causes Purchase

MURFREESBORO, Ark. (AP)—Sale of Arkansas' long-ideal diamond mines for $75,000 to a corporation which produces was announced here Wednesday.

Deeds transferring title to 823 acres, including the 160 on which diamonds have been found, from the Arkansas Diamond Corporation to two lawyers, Robert J. Arthur of Logansport, Ind., and Edwin T. Schneberger, Chicago, Ill., were filed.

Mr. Arthur said that the property, near Murfreesboro, had been leased to the newly-formed North American Diamond Corporation of which he, Schneberger and Walter G. Riddick, Little Rock, lawyer, are the incorporators.

Mr. Arthur said that he and his associates were holding title for "undisclosed principals," and that Ray E. Black of Chicago, who obtained an option on the property from the Arkansas Diamond Corporation last year, was acting for the same principals.

"In view of the need for industrial diamonds at this time in defense preparations, the corporation contemplates mining operations of the diamond mine," he said.

He said engineering work had been completed but said he did not know how soon mining operations would start.

Full scale operations have not been attempted since about 1920. A Smithsonian Institute report in 1925 said that 10,000 diamonds with a value of $150,000 had been taken from the field.

The field was discovered in 1907 by a farmer who still lives in this vicinity. It was developed by a company composed largely of Arkansas citizens and turned over in 1919 to the Arkansas Diamond Corporation, a Virginia corporation.

This company leased the property to Black last year for $2,500 with an option to purchase at $175,000 or to release for a second year at $10,000.

Free Auction of Farm Articles Starts Monday

66 Hope Business Houses Sponsor Monthly Event for Farmers

Beginning this Monday, July 7, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, Hope will offer the farmers of this territory a free monthly auction for household articles and farm implements. No livestock, poultry or other perishables may be offered, as the auction is limited simply to farm or household articles and equipment.

The auction will be held the first Monday of every month.

Silas Sanford is the auctioneer.

On West Second St.

The place will be the vacant lot between the Broadway hotel and Hope Auto company, on West Second street.

All articles brought there by farmers of the Hope trade area will be auctioned off without charge by Mr. Sanford.

The auction is sponsored by the Trade Promotion Committee of Hope Junior Chamber of Commerce, and is paid for by a group of 66 co-operating Hope business firms.

Announcement of the auction and the special bargain offers of Hope stores for this opening event appear on Pages 4 and 5 of today's Star.

Unfortunately, over the past 10 years Japan has destroyed the reputation of her people as willing to confine themselves to these legitimate and reasonable objectives. Does not the world know what Japanese business men do in a strange country, beside business? Does it not know what Japanese ships and fishing vessels do in strange waters beside fish?

I anyone ignorant of what citizens of Hitler Germany do in foreign lands beside what the rest of the world considers legitimate business? When every drummer, every fisherman, every consul, every traveler, is an agent for international revolution, for government spying, for domestic intrigue and the sowing of dissension, then business is no longer business.

That is the tragedy.

...snippets of totalitarian powers have long since proved that no one can trust them to be what they seem to be, to carry on simply the business they say they wish to carry on.

That is why demands, reasonable on their face, are not really reasonable and even tolerable, and must be refused.

Youthful Burglar Sleeps on Job

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—A 17-year-old youth who broke into a grocery found it was a mistake to go to sleep on the job.

Patrolman Charles Henry said the boy entered the store at night, took a raincoat, two pounds of cheese and several candy bars.

Eighteen by his attempt at robbery, the youth crept into the basement to wait until he could get enough courage to leave the store.

Then he fell asleep and employees found him there.

Germany's Armies Pour Into Russia

Germans Claim Resistance of Russians Gone

But Reds Say Lines Holding; Stalin Makes Appeal to People

By the Associated Press

Adolf Hitler's high command reported Thursday that resistance of the Red army appeared to be smashed along the entire 2,000 mile front from the Arctic to the Black sea and said an "unimaginable chaos" had broken over the entire Russian armies.

The announcement pictured a decisive turn on the battlefield while the Russians asserted the main German thrust to Moscow had been blocked and reported Soviet troops to be locked in battle with the Germans on a vast new battlefield on the road to the capital.

Great German Attack

United armies on the entire front between the Black sea and the Arctic have started to attack, the German high command reported, saying "four troops crossed the Prut river toward Dnestr Wednesday and it now appears the resistance of the Red army has been broken and a backward movement is apparent on the entire front."

Amid assertions by Hitler's high command, the Russian high command said the vanguard of the Moscow-bound Nazi invasion troops had been hurled back in repeated attempts to cross the Borzhn river.

The Red army was also reported to have halted and inflicted a "heavy defeat" on a German mechanized column driving to Shepetovka, 20 miles inside the old border of the Ukraine on the road to Kiev, the capital.

"Through the night our troops in heavy fighting stemmed the enemy advance," the Russians said.

In London sources asserted that it was the general feeling that the German drive was slowing.

Stalin Appeals to Russians

Stalin, in a rare speech, warned the people of "grave danger" and called upon them to combat the enemy with a huge campaign of blowing up bridges, destroying roads, and guerrilla warfare.

Berlin said Stalin's broadcast—his first to the Russian people since 1935—bore a striking resemblance to the speech of France's leader Premier Reynaud when the German forces broke through the Maginot line last summer.

The Soviet war bulletin, far from indicating a general collapse of the armies, stated a fierce battle raged near Borisov, 50 miles along the highway from Minsk to Moscow, and 70 miles east of Lwow.

DNB, official German news agency, reported Thursday Russian resistance on the eastern front a few hours after the Nazi high command said the backbone of the Soviet armies had been smashed along the entire front.

DNB added that bad weather aided the Russians in putting up a stiff resistance, and said snow was falling in the Lwow sector.

Meanwhile in London sources said British forces may be preparing a back-door surprise attack for Germany, saying the recent aerial offensive of the RAF was a prelude to an invasion of the continent possibly before August 1.

Hotel Henry to Bailey, Powers

Diamond Cafe Proprietors Lease It From Mrs. Henry

Hotel Henry, Third and Elm streets, has been taken over from Mrs. J. A. Henry, owner, on a long-term lease by the Diamond cafe proprietors, Ralph Bailey and Buck Powers, they announced Thursday.

Mrs. Henry is in Mexico on vacation but will return home on or before July 20, at which time Mr. Bailey and Mr. Powers will formally assume management of the hotel, which occupies part of the ground floor and all of the upstairs space in the same building in which the Diamond cafe is located.

Hotel Henry has 22 rooms, will be operated in conjunction with the Diamond cafe and within a short time, probably 45 days or so, will be prepared to accommodate banquets and special parties, the new proprietors announced.

Mr. Bailey and Mr. Powers, who completed their first year as Diamond cafe proprietors last month, said they were starting work at once remodeling and streamlining the cafe's kitchen to make it one of the most modern and best in the state.

The Diamond Cafe-Hotel Henry organization now comprises a staff of 16 persons, Mr. Bailey and Mr. Powers said.

Bus Strike Is in Its 6th Day

25 Drivers and Mechanics Out on Arkansas Line

LITTLE ROCK — A strike of approximately 25 drivers and mechanics of Arkansas Motor Coaches, Ltd., continued through its fifth day Wednesday with representatives of the workers and the company reporting no change in the status of the walkout. Pickets continued to patrol the street in front of the bus station and company office at Main and Markham streets, Wednesday night.

The company's Memphis-Little Rock-Texas operations were suspended.

Olin T. Flournoy, commissioner of conciliation for the Conciliation Service, United States Department of Labor, has left after conferring with representatives of the company and the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America to which the striking employees belong.

The chief of staff said there was 120,000 men in overseas garrisons, namely Alaska and Newfoundland.

"When and where Army forces are to serve is a question that should be determined by the commander and chief and congress and not confused with problems of readiness to serve," Marshall said.

Maneuver Hdqs Lost to Hope

Proving Ground Much to Hope Said Lt.-Gen. Lear

CAMP ROBINSON, Ark. (AP)—Lt.-Gen. Ben Lear, commander of the Second Army, announced Thursday that Hope, Ark., was definitely "out" as headquarters for the Second Army during the August maneuvers because of the "conflict caused by the selection of the Hope area for the War Department's Proving Ground."

"Hope was originally selected," he said, "but that Proving Ground has caused some complications and the matter has been reopened."

So far as he knew no substitute site has been selected.

Asks Retention of Reserves

Marshall Would Keep Guards, Officers in Service

WASHINGTON (AP)—General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, urged Thursday that drafted, reserve officers and national guards, be kept in service more than a year and asked restriction of the law which confined the forces to the Western Hemisphere.

In a report to Secretary Stimson, Marshall said that events of the past few days "are even more indication of the suddenness with which army conflict can spread to areas which were heretofore called free."

"There are," he added, "legal restrictions on the use of these men which should be removed."

He recommended that the War Department be given authority to extend the period of service of the selective service men, officers of the reserve corps, and the national guard.

Under the present selective service act the maximum of training is one year, and stipulated that the groups could not be used outside the Western Hemisphere.

The war department official said the restriction affected the whole army as selectees have been placed into units with regular army men, making the entire unit subject to restrictive legislation. The law does not apply to regular army men.

The chief of staff said there was 120,000 men in overseas garrisons, namely Alaska and Newfoundland.

"When and where Army forces are to serve is a question that should be determined by the commander and chief and congress and not confused with problems of readiness to serve," Marshall said.

Health Officer Warns Dairies

State Official to Remove Grade A Labels Here

D. W. Jones, director of milk control for the State Health Department, said Thursday that beginning next week work would start in southwest Arkansas counties on cleaning up health conditions preceding the Second army maneuvers here during August.

The state department will establish offices, probably in the courthouse, here Monday. The health service will include a mobile bacteriological unit to make tests of milk and foods.

All restaurants and eating places will be inspected and if they don't meet requirements will be barred to soldiers. Military police will be posted at such places and no soldier will be allowed to enter Mr. Jones said.

Mr. Jones expressed disappointment at the lack of enforcement of the milk ordinance in Hope and said "as a result of this lack of enforcement grade A milk labels will be removed from dairies in this area."

He said the health department would probably be here two months.

DiMaggio Sets All-Time Record

Yankee Star Hits in 45 Consecutive Games

NEW YORK (AP)—Joe DiMaggio hit a fifth inning home run Wednesday that brought him an all-time major league record for hitting in 45 consecutive games and helped the Yankees to an 8-to-4 victory over Boston.

The record was set by Willie Keeler of Baltimore in 1897, when fouls were not counted as strikes.

Fading Heber "Dink" Newsome, the rookie knuckleballer, DiMaggio failed to hit in his first two times up. In the fifth he looked at two wide balls, clouted a high foul into the third tier of Yankee stadium, and finally hit a fly into the lower stands in left field for his 18th home run of the year.

This blow came after Johnny Sturm had walked, stole second, and scored on a double by Red Rolfe. It caused Newsome to be replaced by Jack Wilson and so set the Red Sox that they allowed the Yankees to score six times on three hits in that inning.

Rooney, Tracy Together Again
'Men of Boys Town' Comes to Saenger Sunday

With Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, it's one for all and all for one. It is interesting in this respect that Rooney literally has grown up with Tracy, and their careers have shared many mutual highlights. Tracy is the first to give Rooney credit for contributing to his outstanding successes. Rooney points to Tracy as his guide and inspiration.

Their first picture together was "Rifflin" filmed in 1936. At that time Tracy had yet to play Father Tim in "San Francisco" and to go on from there to become one of the greatest stars of the screen. Rooney was just another boy actor, with his future ahead of him.

"We got along from the first," says Tracy, "because both of us are essentially character actors. Even then Mickey impressed me as being the most natural actor, young or old. I ever worked with him. I think he was almost as good then as he is now but his talents hadn't been fully appreciated."

Tracy and Rooney began to hit their stride in "Captains Courageous," which brought Tracy his first Academy Award for his memorable characterization of Manuel, the humble Portuguese fisherman.

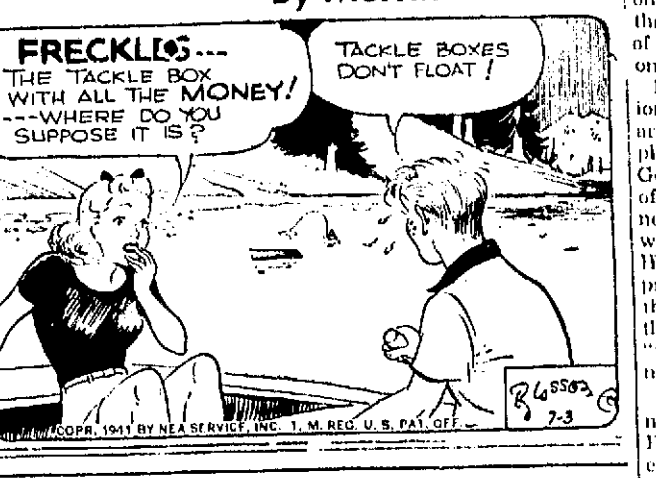

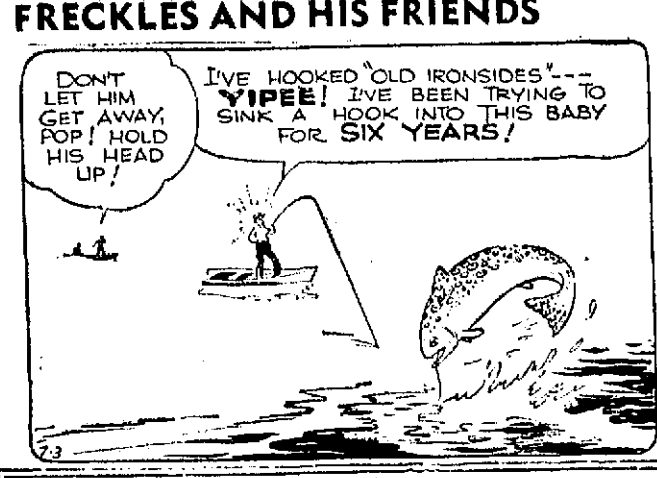

"I really began to grow up during that picture," says Mickey. "That was when I began to watch Spencer work and decided that I wanted to become the kind of actor he is."

"Boys Town," made three years ago, firmly cemented the Tracy-Rooney combination. Mickey, who enjoys clowning like any other kid, settled down to business. He made Tracy his model and underplayed scenes. For his performance of Whitley Marsh, Mayor of Boys Town, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer made him a star.

Tracy won his second Academy Award as Father Edward J. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, while Mickey received a special award for Boys Town and "Love Finds Andy Hardy."

Tracy and Rooney have since continued their parallel careers, the former making "Edison, The Man," and the latter "Young Tom Edison." Last year Mickey topped the list of the ten money-making stars as the box-office champion, with Tracy third. Mickey also won a newspaper contest as "King of the Movies," with Bette Davis his "Queen."

Now Tracy and Rooney are together again as co-stars of "Men of Boys Town," sequel to "Boys Town" with Tracy again playing Father Flanagan and Rooney "Whitley." The picture will be shown Sunday at have happened, they stand—and the one great fact that stands here is that this lesson records the beginning of a triumph that was far greater than one could have conceived possible.

Dead End Kids Score Big Hit

Billy Halop Stars in Rialto Picture July 4

Every time anyone mistakes Billy Halop for a regular tough guy, he is sincerely flattered. Not that Billy wants to be thought tough. It's because he considers it a tribute to his acting ability.

Billy, head man of the "Dead End Kids," who star with Gladys George, Barton MacLane and The Little Tough Guys in Universal's "Hit the Road" at the Rialto theater, isn't a product of New York's East Side, nor any of the city's so-called "tough" districts.

He was born in Brooklyn, the son of Attorney Benjamin and Lucille Halop.

His parents wanted Billy to study for the legal profession, but he had other ideas. He wanted to become an actor, so he was sent to the Professional Children's school.

Billy is saving his money, investing it in endowments and annuities. He wants to remain in theatrical work.

Two-Fisted Role
In "Hit the Road" he is one of five reform-school boys paroled in the custody of MacLane, who has the role of a reformed gangster. Others in the cast are Huntz Hall, Bernard Punsley, Gabriel Dell, Evelyn Ankers, Charles Lang and Bob Watson.

Joe May directed "Hit the Road," from the screen play by Robert Lee Johnson and Brenda Weisberg.

Jerome Ash was cameraman on the production which was made under the supervision of Associate Producer Ken Goldsmith.

Harrison in Hollywood

New York Nuttury Sets Up Movie Stand

HOLLYWOOD — Your correspondent went calling on Olsen & Johnson the other day and only got half tickets, but by the third day the house way through his list. The latter member of the "Hellzapoppin'" team had popped down town to rent the big in our career," Olsen observed. "First Christmas float, with deer and sleigh, we played for applause and weren't for a ride along Santa Claus Lane on the Fourth of July."

What I saw of Ole Olsen was a knock-out. He was a lot like play for the box office. I've developed Jack Benny. They're good friends, so Olsen probably won't resent the comparison. They're such good friends, in fact, that Olsen squelched a scheme to use clips from a very old and very bad Benny picture in the adaptation of "Hellzapoppin'" for the screen.

Just how this lunatic hogged-nodge which so far has grossed about $4,000,000 on Broadway and the road—is going to be transferred to celluloid is still anybody's guess. Olsen and Johnson scattered their show all over the theater, making stogoes of the customers. Closest they'll be able to get to movie audiences will be through a few three-dimensional sequences seen with special spectacles.

Oh Yes, a Plot, Too
So far as I can figure, "Hellzapoppin'" will turn out to be a movie making fun of the difficulties of turning "Hellzapoppin'" into a movie. There'll be a thread of story in which Martha Raye plays an amorous dipsomaniac and Michael Auer is a real count who deliberately poses as a phony count because society is more amused by impostors.

Olsen, after working his way through Northwestern University, got an 8:30 to 5:30 job in a factory, sang illustrated songs in a movie house from 6:30 to 10:30, then moved on to a night club where he warbled until 2 a. m.

"With nothing to do around 6 o'clock in the evenings," he recalled, "I got married." That was 28 years ago and you'd never guess it to look at either of the Olsens. They have two daughters, 6 and 26, and an intermediate son.

A couple of years after his marriage, Olsen was part of a straw hat quartet billed as "The College Four." They needed a piano player. Chic Johnson, who had started in vaudeville with a girl partner, was recommended. "To hear him talk," Olsen chuckled, "you'd have thought he was making $10,000 a week and he was booked for five years. But he joined us."

Did Well Down Under
They later became a team. Olsen playing a fiddle and Johnson an accordion. More and more goofy comedy was added to the act and they soon became headliners. Along about the time of the death of vaudeville, a good offer came for six weeks in Australia. They stayed there two years.

In 1938 they played at Phoenix, Ariz., during that city's annual Fiesta del Sol. It included a ETAOINSHRH and Olsen and Johnson recognized a one time. They adopted it, gathered up some acts in Chicago and were finishing an engagement in Philadelphia when a Shubert deal began brewing for a fast vast carnival of lunacy at the Winter Garden. All but two of the critics panned it merciless-

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Early Christians' Faith and Courage Can Overcome Modern Fear, Violence

Text: Acts 16:6-15
By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance

It is with mixed feelings that one takes up the study in this lesson of the introduction of Christianity into Europe. How much are the places and events of that time related to the places and events of which we have been reading in our daily papers of late, as we have seen Greece and the Near East become the battleground of world conflict!

The unbeliever or cynic might remark on the irony of the fact that, where the triumph of the Gospel seemed so effective, after 19 centuries great armies are arrayed in destruction with the powerful machines and equipment of a civilization that has gone astray.

Yet, the cynic notwithstanding, this lesson and the lesson that follow are an important study in hope. The one thing about history is that it cannot be wiped out. When things Latin being used in diplomatic documents in England as late as that time, John Milton was given the duty of translating into that language all letters to foreign rulers in 1649.

● SERIAL STORY

ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE

BY DONNA ASHWORTH

COPYRIGHT, 1941,
NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Ken has Lita's future all planned. She will go to his home town, Farmington, resume her real name, Ann Marshall. The society folk of Farmington will meet her, accept her. His mother will welcome her. But if Ken married a dancer and took her home, his mother would never see Lita. Lita is not easily won over. She knows she would not like Ken's mother. She tells Ken to keep his picture. She doesn't like it.

JERRY FINDS OUT CHAPTER IV

DAYS sped into weeks and Lita looked at Jerry, wondering if it were true that she no longer loved him and that she did love Ken Richards.

She studied the apartment in which they lived, looking at the Venetian blinds, the lovely hangings, the white and chromium furniture, the glass tables, everything as modern as tomorrow, and thought of a white house back in the trees. She listened to the roar of the traffic, watched the bright lights and thought of birds singing and the light of the stars.

"I don't know."

Each time she talked to Ken she said the same thing, because Jerry was so much a part of her life, and the change Ken had suggested was so remote and unreal. It would take several weeks to get affairs arranged, to go to Reno and get a divorce. She shivered at the thought of the publicity. Then she thought of the future Ken had promised her, a home and friends, children, happiness, such as she had never known. At length she made up her mind.

As she and Jerry came into the apartment after their night's performance, she stopped beside the door, watching Jerry as he went across the room. She had promised Ken that she would tell him.

She bit her scarlet lips as she met his brown eyes and studied his lean, handsome face.

Jerry hadn't had many breaks. He'd worked up from nothing, sold papers on the streets, worked day and night to get where he was, and now she was getting ready to tear down his house of cards.

He could get another partner. Anyone could dance with Jerry, because he danced so wonderfully. He might marry Ruth Eustace, with all her money and position. She could give Jerry everything that any man could want.

"What's on your mind, darling?" Jerry threw off his coat and lighted a cigarette, slouched down on the davenport. "Spill it."

"I've been thinking a long time, Jerry. We haven't been getting along so well. We don't seem to be happy any more, and I... I want a divorce."

"A divorce!" He sat upright. "A divorce, Lita, you must be drunk. What are you thinking about?"

She laughed, a harsh, brittle laugh. Her heart was pounding so she couldn't get her breath. "Just what I said—a divorce."

"But you can't. Why, Lita—" He was on his feet, hurrying toward her, his arms about her, as his eyes searched her face. "Darling, what is the matter? What have I done? I know I've been cross and irritable because I was tired, but it isn't your fault. You've known that."

"It isn't anything," She struggled against him. "It isn't anything you've done or haven't done, Jerry. It's just that I don't care any more. All the thrill is gone."

"There's someone else," Realization seemed to sweep over him. "That Richards. You want to marry him?"

"Yes, Jerry darling, please understand." She sought his eyes as she spoke, pleading. "It isn't as if I could do anything about it. You can't fight love. I thought I loved you. We were interested in the same things and you were so gay and kind and sweet and we had so much fun together. But I know now that it wasn't love. I've known it ever since that night I met Ken at Ruth Eustace's party."

"But Lita."

He sat down, staring at her as if he couldn't believe his ears. His face was grayish white and he looked tired and old. His voice was thick, shaking.

"He's changed you already, but I didn't know what was the matter until now. You're not yourself any more. You don't laugh like you used to. Oh, he can't love you like I do. It isn't real."

SHE had known it would be like this, that Jerry wouldn't understand, and she spoke swiftly, angrily. "I do love him, Jerry. And he does understand the soul of me, the things I've always wanted. He isn't crude, I guess that's the word, like you and I. He hasn't come from nothing like we have. He wants me to be a lady like his mother, like I've always dreamed. He wants to give me background, security, something to tie to, not just froth and bright lights and glitter."

"He wants to make you into the imitation of a lady," Jerry was on his feet, his voice harsh as he flung the words at her. "But veneer cracks and when it does, you'll be wanting the bright lights again. You'll be wanting me and like the sap I am, when you call me, I'll come."

September.

Nine members were present for the meeting. In order to bring the club roll up to the required 18 members the following new members were welcomed into the club: Mrs. John Ridgill, Miss Mamie Bryant, Mrs. Ralph Bailey, Mrs. Albert Jewell, and Mrs. Arch Moore.

During the afternoon, Mrs. Nunn served fruit punch and cookies to her guests.

Robbing the Cradle?

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—(P)—Before the infant son of Representative and Mrs. Lyle Born (D-Okla.) was three weeks old, the sheriff in Creek county appointed him a deputy and ordered him to "report for duty."

Latin was the language used in England in diplomatic documents as late as the 17th century.

'Golgotha Crucifixion Movie to Show at Methodist Church

A talking motion picture utterly different from anything ever shown in this community will be presented in First Methodist church auditorium on Sunday evening, July 6, at 8:00 o'clock, under the sponsorship of Wesleyan Guild. The title of the picture is "Golgotha", and it is the first and only talking motion picture ever made of the life and crucifixion of Christ. "Golgotha" presents the immortal story of Christ in a spectacular and impressive manner. Critics everywhere have acclaimed it the greatest talking picture of its kind ever made. It is a remarkable film, that every man, woman and child in this community should see. Since this great motion picture is being presented in First Methodist church auditorium, a complete set of the finest talking motion picture equipment will be brought to this city for the showing of the film. This equipment includes special projector, a complete sound system, and a modern screen. As a result, this picture will be shown in an even more effective manner than if it were shown in a theater.

A free will offering will be taken after show.

Americans have stopped believing in it—for their opponents—now that the country is faced with a real issue, "Is this or isn't it our fight?" More and more often what starts out as a calm discussion of political questions today ends up in bitterness. This is happening in social conversation all over the country. And for anyone who still does believe in the freedom of speech, much of a columnist's mail today is a bit sickening to read.

There are the letters from those who want to get in the war immediately, bitterly accusing the columnist of being in the pay of the Nazi government. And in the same mail will be letters from those who declare flatly that the writer is being told what to say by the present administration.

So Excited That They Aren't Thinking

All these bitter, accusing letters are written because those who write or speak an opinion that varies in the slightest degree from their own.

They have become so excited that they aren't thinking themselves—just blindly believing one side of a question, and they don't want anyone else to do any thinking.

Greater Threat Than Fifth Columnists

If you know any of them—as, of course, you do if you discuss world affairs at all—you begin to wonder if these intolerant, excited, shut-up-if-you-don't-think-as-I-think private citizens aren't a greater threat to the future freedom of America than all the fifth columnists within the country put together.

For unless people believe in freedom of speech, not only for themselves, but for every single citizen, freedom of speech itself is in danger.

We had better think of that before we fall out with a neighbor over differing political opinions, or before we sit down and write an insulting letter to a person who has done nothing more than speak his piece—which is still his American-given right.

BARBS

One thing worse than being in a rut is being on the road to nowhere. An eastern man landed in jail for bigamy. Marrying is a good custom but a bad habit.

When the price of wheat goes up, grocers say it with flour. Correspondent says Germans are getting set to go again, but they're not sure where. We could make a suggestion.

MAKE IT LAST FOREVER!

LIBERTY IS THE blood stream of America. It is what makes this country young, virile, progressive. It builds in people initiative, ingenuity, resourcefulness. It is the strength of a nation at peace.

YET LIBERTY IS fragile as a flower. It needs constant cultivation, pampered care and the constant pruning off of those few malcontents who consistently take liberties without taking Liberty to their hearts. So hard to get—so easy to lose! Retaining Liberty is worth the effort of all of us.

Let's Make This Fourth a Real Holiday!

MAP OF HOPE'S ARMY PROVING GROUND

New High in U. S. Production

Nation at Mid-year Far Exceeds Output of 1917

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
AP General Financial Editor
NEW YORK—Mid-1941 finds America's vast industrial machine shifted into high gear with production experts frantically devising super-chargers and other devices designed to speed production to a pace never before dreamed of in this machine age.

Already, the nation's great mills and factories are pouring forth a grist larger than in the vaunted peacetime "new era" of 1920, far bigger than during the frantic war effort of 1917, yet the cry is more, more, and faster.

The first half of 1941 has seen the arms program move out of the blue print into the production stage. Embanks has swung from new arms plants to the gigantic problem of supply.

The government is swinging its controls over an ever-widening orbit to assure the arms makers of adequate steel, copper, rubber, to make sure that there will be no needless diversion of any of the multitude of supplies needed both by our own growing armed forces, and by Britain.

Mid-1941 sees America coming to grips with a wartime economy, and coming to grips with it with a constantly changing conception of what it means.

We Change Minds

A year ago, France had fallen, President Roosevelt had asked for a couple of billions additional arms appropriation, Admiral Stark had asked for a $4,000,000,000 two-ocean Navy. But few imagined, with huge surpluses of agricultural products, and industry coasting along at two-thirds to three-quarters of what seemed practical capacity, that America would have any difficulty doing the defense job needed. We thought we could have both guns and butter, that the cry of guns or butter seemed a little absurd for America.

But only last month, W. L. Bant of the Office of Production Management told us "we have been operating on a gun and butter philosophy, a butter, ice cream and movie matinee philosophy. . . . We cannot produce the vast quantities of fighting equipment which must be produced and at the same time preserve our standard of living in terms of automobiles and electric conveniences and leisure hours."

A few days later, Stacy May, research chief of OPM, said we are spending at the rate of $13,000,000,000 a year, but it would take three times that to carry out the President's foreign policy.

Already, automobile manufacturers have agreed to cut civilian production starting in August by 20 per cent to "make way for defense, and auto" in both Washington and Detroit expect the cut may be much deeper. The War Department has suggested 50 per cent.

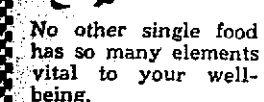

But the production men say there is an enormous amount of "give" in the vast economy of the United States, that by standardization, simplification, and most efficient use of resources, remarkable results may be achieved. Donald M. Nelson, OPM purchases director, said June 18 that productive capacity for defense could be increased by 25 per cent, or perhaps even by a third, by reducing the variety of civilian goods.

What's Ahead

Therefore, for the remainder of 1941, business men expect:

1. Rapidly increasing pressure to boost production of war supplies, including everything needed from ships to shoes.
2. Widening of priorities and price controls.
3. Shortage of some materials, tending to restrict production of some lines of civilian goods, increase use of substitutes, as plastics for aluminum.
4. Intensive efforts to get producers to restrict the number of models and styles of a wide range of civilian products from radio sets to washing machines.
5. Further expansion of plants of arm makers and suppliers and increasing use of small plants through sub-contracting.

6. A new tax measure, bringing a big but as yet undetermined boost in levies on corporations and individuals.

7. Limitation of profits, by price controls and taxes.

8. An uneven, but in the aggregate, sweeping reduction of unemployment.

How smoothly the national economy adjusts itself to what is ahead, of course, depends upon the degree of success obtained in dealing with a host of problems.

Price control is one of the most complicated undertakings. As prices rise, the cost of defense and eventual tax load goes up. But the price spiral at any point is a red-hot thing to take hold of. Efforts to keep down wages in the face of increased employment and higher living costs, bringing danger of labor trouble and production delay. The farmer sees costs of things he must buy going up, and demands better prices for his produce. The manufacturer insists that as his costs rise, he must get better prices.

Cost of living for wage earners, as shown by the Industrial Conference Board index, had risen through May only 2.6 per cent over a year previously, but sensitive raw material prices, particularly foods and imported staples, have shown a steep boost.

The Associated Press daily index of 35 wholesale raw staple prices, shows a jump of more than 20 per cent. How much this may ultimately be reflected in living costs will depend upon future developments, and particularly the operations of the government price controllers.

Although business profits mounted with the big volumes of the early months of the year, Wall Street, as reflected in the stock market, feels that profit margins are in for a squeeze between rising costs and efforts to keep the lid on prices.

In the first quarter of 1941, a tabulation by the Federal Reserve Bank shows 441 corporations had aggregate net profits 16 per cent higher than in the first three months of last year. Even in this showing, however, profits did not come even close to keeping pace with the increase in business volume, and Wall Street's feeling that profits are in for a further pinch is clearly indicated in the fact that share prices, on the average, are about where they were a year ago. And this is despite the fact that industrial activity, as shown by The Associated Press weekly index, is up more than 30 per cent.

Financing of the defense effort has continued at low credit rates, with U. S. Government bonds selling at levels of yielding 2 per cent or less. The billions of spending, present and prospective brought financial circles from time to time, but some banking authorities pointed out that much has been learned about monetary control since World War I, and that even in England, despite the far-reaching disruption of her economy, wholesale prices have risen only about 40 per cent, and the government's bonds are held at such good prices as to yield only around 3 per cent.

What proportion of the defense cost can or will be met with taxes and how much by borrowing depends upon what congress does with the new tax bill, but meanwhile Treasury offerings of bonds continue to be heavily oversubscribed. The beginnings of an effort to finance by selling government savings bonds directly to individuals, rather than having recourse to extensively to banks and thus inflating the bank credit structure, brought returns in the early weeks of the program this spring of $100,000,000 or more a week. This plan may be pursued more vigorously later on.

Private financing through bank loans continued to expand, the total for 191 major cities having risen some $1,700,000,000 since August, 1939. But the Reconstruction Finance Corp. has thus far taken a big slice of the defense financing, its Defense Plant Corp. having made total commitments of over $600,000,000.

The securities markets generally re-

bers of the crew always average 60 pounds.

When three weeks are up, the bobbers who unload, clean and pack the fish, begin gathering during the late hours of night in the wharf sheds along the quay where the fishing fleet docks. They seldom have definite word that the boats are coming because no longer do these ships use wire-lass. But usually—as on the night I spent from midnight to morning with Gus Key, first mate of the Happy Barnard—they seem to know when ships will arrive.

It was a wild night, as thrilling in its own way as any in London during an all-out blitz. Not that there were any bombs along the docks this night. But the boom-town atmosphere provided enough flashes of excitement.

It started around midnight. The first boat came bumping up to the quay with lots of noise the only lights were the small red glows from the cigarettes of the men on the docks who were standing by.

Introduction to Gus Key
The first boat made it fine and then the Happy Barnard moved in. It was coming too fast, though, and banged into the side of the first. It bounced back and then headed fast for the dock. Automatically everyone scattered, but the man at the wheel gave it a twist and so it only slammed into the dock.

That was my introduction to Gus Key. He was the first man off. He made the rope fast, yelled and then with the rest of the crew at his heels headed up through the sheds for the paymaster's office. They had a full boat that golden fish this night and they knew they had plenty coming to them.

The Captain was the last. He had to check with the foreman of the bobbers who by now were swarming over the Happy Barnard in the first stages of unloading. Then he too, was off to the shed where I met Gus Key, who is angular, nearly six feet and big-hearted.

A pub was his first port of call, where two glasses of beer cost him $29 because two glasses of beer meant two rounds for the house. Then, outside. There was no lack of transportation at this hour. A fleet of taxis was lined up and Gus Key became the owner of one for the night. Most every unboxed small store which ships in patronage was keeping open. They knew by morning much of this money would be spent.

If they were thinking of Gus Key they were right. Nearly $800 he spent without batting an eye. He has a wife and three children, which does not worry him because, like all the fishermen who work for a company, he has an arrangement whereby his wife draws a salary each week for herself and the children. So what he gets from the paymaster at the end of a trip is what he considers surplus.

To three pubs the taxi drove—and then Gus Key got to wanting a moosehead. He got the idea in a crap game on the floor of a pub when he was trying to roll sevens against a heavy-set sailor called Alf, who had just kept a fur coat for his wife. But Gus Key had already bought a fur coat for the wife the last time in, so to him at that hour a moosehead seemed the only solution to the gift problem.

No one knows yet where he got the moosehead, but he came back to the pub after an hour, carrying it like the George Medal. That's when I thought of "Room Service," the old Broadway hit. Because Gus Key's moosehead looked just as moth-eaten as the one they trundled across the stage nightly in that play back in 1938.

But came the dawn and Gus Key left for home in the taxi, with his moosehead. The others drifted away and then the waterfront spots were deserted. The fish docks, too, were empty. The extra constables who had been on duty were all sitting in the small wharf hut, resting and drinking tea after a night which they said was hardly welcome even once in every three weeks.

The fish cleaners, who had worked at top speed to unload, clean, pack and move the fish from the sheds before any incendiaries might come raining down, had left too.

Traffic Jam on the Airways

President Urged to Appoint Air Control Coordinator

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON—Some folks here are perturbed about the possibilities of a traffic jam on the highways of the air.

The other day a delegation called on the President and urged him to appoint an "air control coordinator," a sort of traffic cop of the air, with broad powers to regulate traffic even to the point, if necessary, of grounding private flying in army and navy maneuvers areas.

Trying to get anything official on the situation is like trying to pull teeth with eyebrow tweezers. On both sides of the fence, authorities are afraid of touching off a powder keg of all types in the country today. About 17,000 of these are private and commercial planes. There are tens of thousands of pilots. Add a few million passengers and you have some bought a fur coat for his wife. But Gus Key had already bought a fur coat for the wife the last time in, so to him at that hour a moosehead seemed the only solution to the gift problem.

Germans List British Losses

Claims Toll of 768,950 Tons of Shipping in June

BERLIN—(AP)—German sea and air attacks on ships bearing Britain's vital overseas supplies took a toll of 768,950 tons in June, the German high command announced Thursday. Submarine alone destroyed 417,450 tons, the high command said, adding that the figure did not include a large number of ships lost by mines or badly damaged ships.

idea of the persons affected by any regulations or curtailment of private flying.

On the other hand, it was realized that the army and navy must have some priorities in the skyways even before the Civil Aeronautics Board came out of its huddle recently and established a ceiling of seventeen thousand feet above sea level for all commercial and private aviation.

Above that the skies belong to the army and navy. The board added the "further regulation that all planes not equipped with two-way radios and sensitive altimeters must stay within 1,500 feet of the ground."

This caused a little easier breathing in those aeronautical circles that feared the appointment of a traffic cop for the skyways would wreck the private flying as well as the civilian pilot training program—that vast reservoir out of which the army and navy are drawing so many of their flying cadets. Whether it is a complete solution remains to be seen.

It doesn't eliminate one of the army's chief grouches, namely that secret air maneuvers are handicapped by civilian flying. A secret maneuver can't very well be secret if the army has to justify dozens of airport dispatchers just what it plans to do and when.

It is believed, however, that stratification of traffic on a 30,000-mile skyway network will simplify matters not only for the flyers but for those men who keep the radio beams buzzing in the nation's 400 range stations.

How the whole thing started isn't positive, but in recent weeks a lot of stories have been drifting into Washington about congestion as a result of military aviation. One such was that of a kittenish pilot, tail man in a formation flight, had decided to practice an Immelman turn on the tail of a cross-country airliner. Apparently, the fellow didn't come close, but it was near enough to scare the daylight out of a few passengers.

Another report was that an army pilot, given the all clear to land his high speed fighter plane on a midwestern port, hit the runway just as a student flyer was taxiing his little plane across the field. The army pilot had to spin his plane and rip off a wing to avoid a collision. These stories were numerous and undoubtedly gave rise to the fact that something should be done.

Any mention of a traffic jam on the highways of the air at this point, however, is especially amusing in view of what Charles Stanton, deputy administrator of the Civilian Aeronautics Authority, once told me.

"Our program and our planes here are not just aimed at next week or even next year. We are looking forward to the day when the United States will have 300,000 to 500,000 airplanes. That's just about one plane for every 60 autos, which certainly isn't too much to expect. On that basis, within a 25-mile radius of New York City, there would be 50,000 planes. And when that times comes, we will be ready to handle the situation. These are just the horse and buggy days of aviation."

Two Important Letters in Your Life

WASHINGTON—You may be reading more, from now on, about Miss Harriett Elliott's Consumer Division in Leon Henderson's Office of Price Administration and Civil Supply. The CD will be pitching at you, for you to catch or duck as your conscience and reflexes may dictate, more information of the type shown in its consumer prices bulletin which now goes out twice a month to some 5000 women's clubs, trade unions and similar organizations. It tells you to fill your cool bin now, how to buy work clothes, how to conserve furnace oil and gasoline and how to buy health when you buy food.

CD will try to spread its messages through news-papers and magazines, by radio and newsreel, to anyone interested enough to pay attention. It will spread information on average prices on consumer commodities, keep tabs on the cost of living, watch supplies and shortages, determine how much is too much. If you have not been consumer conscious before, you will be exposed to it now.

It will all be done in the interests of national defense, fellow citizens, which in these days is rapidly assuming the role of dictating how much you shall pay for and what goes into the ice box or automobile you may not be able to buy.

When OPACS was set up, the Consumer Division was provided for, but the bigger job of getting price administration machinery running crowded Miss Elliott's work into the wings.

Now, however, the bill has been completely worked over. The actors have been switched around. Miss Elliott retains her co-starring authority as associate administrator to leading man Leon Henderson, new talent has been brought in for featured roles in the key divisions, an organization table has been worked out for a cast of 180 people, half of whom will get more than $26,000 a year, and everybody is happy. Watch 'em grow.

Scotchman Watches Prices
Scotch-born John M. Cassels, who was formerly head of the Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., consumer education movement, sits in as assistant administrator to Miss Elliott. Under him a sections to plan policy, study standards, handle publicity and deal with consumers.

Some of the problems that lie ahead of the consumer division will best illustrate how it will work. As national income goes up and wages increase, consumers are expected to demand new things, or more of the same. Under an emergency economy, with production facilities transferred to defense, supplies of some commodities will be limited. One of the immediate jobs is to see what effect the shortage of ships or the diversion of shipping from old trade routes will have on the supplies of things American shoppers buy.

Try to Keep Up Quality
Joe Nicholson, former purchasing agent for the city of Milwaukee, has been borrowed by the consumer division to head up what may become one of its most important activities, the maintenance of quality in consumer goods during the defense economy. With administration pressure to keep prices down, and with the number of styles and models being reduced to make way for defense production, consumer experts believe there may be some effort to cheapen the product while keeping the price at its former level.

Any general moves in that direction will be battled by the consumer division. The anti-trust division of the Justice Department has indicated it will consider conspiracies for the reduction of quality standards as violations of the anti-trust law, and in restraint of trade.

The consumer division will have no power in itself to fix prices. It will participate with the price division of OPACS in that work. No maximum price schedules have as yet been set on ultimate consumer goods, though the OPACS orders putting ceilings on hides and cotton yarn had their effect in attempting to hold down prices of shoes and cotton goods.

What the whole consumer movement is aimed at is the maintenance of the American standard of living during the defense effort, at a minimum increase in cost to the consumer.

Motorists' Paradise—No License, No Tax

OCRAUCKE, N. C.—(AP)—The automobiles on this lonely island of North Carolina's "Outer Banks" carry no license plates—and no noney cop has to know why.

And the half dozen Ocraucke car owners pay no state gasoline tax, either.

You see, there are no highways on Ocraucke—only trails in the sand. Driving itself is an art, accomplished with half normal pressure in tires.

The island has no jail or city hall, no police officer and no mayor. Its population of less than 10 live together in peace, as a rule, but when an act is committed that is not in accordance with the unwritten code of Ocraucke, residents band together to deal with the offender as circumstances dictate.

Just this noon we heard that the most popular restaurant drink is soup.
